Department of Geography & The First Nations Studies Program
The University of Western Ontario

Invites you to a viewing of “Gifts from the Elders”

CHANTELLE A.M. RICHMOND is an Anishinabe scholar from Pic River First Nation (Ontario). She holds a CIHR New Investigator award in Aboriginal Health and is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Geography, with a cross appointment in the First Nation Studies Program at Western University (London, Ontario). Her research is framed by community-based approaches that aim to understand how processes of environmental dispossession, both historic and contemporary, work to affect social determinants of health among Indigenous peoples. Chantelle collaborates with various First Nation communities and Aboriginal organizations to study these important issues. She has published widely in health and social sciences. In her Indigenous Health Lab (www.indigenoushealthlab.ca) at Western University, Chantelle supervises a number of graduate and undergraduate students, all of whom are working on critical environment/health issues in the First Nation context. Chantelle is enthusiastic about the role that knowledge translation plays in her research. She views her role as a teacher, mentor and advocate as critical for increasing capacity and overall well-being in Aboriginal communities.

FILM SYNOPSIS

"Gifts from the Elders" is a 60 minute documentary that follows five Anishinabe youth on a summer research project with their Elders, whose stories guide them on a journey back to preceding generations that lived a healthy lifestyle off of the land. Their stories chronicle the devastating impact that environmental and cultural dispossession had on the flow of knowledge from Elders to youth, and ultimately on the health of their people. As their summer comes to an end, the youth emerge with "gifts" of knowledge and teachings from their Elders, inspiring a renewed determination to forge a hopeful and healthy future for the next generation."

There will be the opportunity for questions and discussion following the film.
